The bold autumn colours are all around us, as we walk or drive in the Niagara region. These vibrant colours can also be seen at the Niagara Pumphouse Arts Centre in Canadian artist Nancy L. Moore's solo exhibition, Light on My Path: A Journey Through Nature.

This exhibition opened Wednesday and runs to Nov. 30 in the Joyner Gallery.

Growing up in Ontario, Moore was raised in a household where art and creativity were always encouraged by both parents. Her late father, Wayne Moore, an artist who loved nature, gave her a solid foundation on which to build.

“As an artist, I feel incredibly fortunate to be able to paint and draw without limits. I enjoy experimenting with different mediums, working mostly in acrylics,” says Moore. “My style is largely experimental, with an emphasis on abstracting nature and landscapes. I never set out to replicate an image, but instead strive to convey a mood or evoke an emotion using loose lines, rich texture, and bold colours.”

Known for her uplifting and evocative style, Moore’s paintings often feature forests, wildflowers, rivers, and other elements of the Canadian landscape. Each piece reflects her deep appreciation for nature, rendered with warmth, optimism, and an unmistakable personal energy.

Moore is a graduate of the graphic design program at George Brown College. Since 1997 she has been the co-owner of Seastar Images Inc., a graphics company located in Ajax, Ont. She has donated her artwork to several community causes.

The public is invited to attend the opening reception on Sunday, Nov. 2 from 2 to 4 p.m., where guests can meet the artist and experience her work firsthand. Remarks will be shared at 2:30 p.m.
